MONEY & STRATEGY

RELATIONSHIPS ARE A BUSINESS ASSET

The strongest business relationships rarely come from one conversation. They grow through consistency — showing up, following up and finding ways to be useful.

With several Chamber programs taking place this week, there are plenty of opportunities to reconnect with people already in your network and meet someone new.

FOLLOW UP WITH THREE PEOPLE

Reach out to three people you've met through the Chamber during the past month. A quick email, phone call or coffee invitation can turn a casual introduction into a meaningful business relationship.

MAKE ONE INTRODUCTION

Think about two people in your network who could benefit from knowing one another — and connect them.

SHOW UP WITH PURPOSE

At your next Chamber event, don't measure success by how many business cards you collect. Measure it by whether you leave with one relationship worth developing.

THIS WEEK'S BUSINESS CHALLENGE

Turn one Chamber connection into a coffee, meeting or meaningful follow-up.

RELATIONSHIPS COMPOUND JUST LIKE INVESTMENTS.
